

As a young ham currently working towards obtaining my HF priveleges, I am opposed to BPL and what most of the Amateur Radio community considers will "kill" low-power HF communications. Consumers don't need yet another technology for broadband and the FCC doesn't need more red tape and law suits that will surely be brought if BPL is approved. And frankly, I just don't think this is a sound or necessary technology.